What Do You Think?

What does junior college mean to you? In reply to this question, some say that it is just a continuation of high school with an increase in the number of courses offered and the expenses incurred. Others feel that junior college is the midpoint or leveling-off period between high school and their ultimate goal, which is graduation with a four-year degree. What do you think? How do you feel about your own Columbia Basin Junior College? How often have you heard us classed as "another business school," or felt a little embarrassed to admit that you attend CBC.

A comparatively new school, we have much room for improvement and the chance to grow in such manner that we will be an asset to both our community and our state. At present, we have facilities which provide the opportunity to fulfill high school graduation requirements, to gain vocational training, and to complete the first two years of a regular four-year college program.

In comparing our tuition and fees with those of a larger school, you will find that they are kept to a minimum, which is certainly to our advantage. Every effort is made to secure housing and financial aid to those who are in need. There are numerous opportunities for employment to those who desire to work and many scholarships are offered. The people employed by the college have been eager and anxious to do their part in helping us to find the correct solution to our problems.

However, despite all the above advantages, there has been much talk about the general dissatisfaction and lack of spirit in our student body. No one student or group of students can do it all, although right now the burden is falling heavily on a small group of individuals who desire to make our college a successful one. This takes the co-operation and sincere interest of each and every person; Columbia Basin College needs your support!!! This problem may be due, somewhat, to the fact that the ages, occupations, and goals of the students attending our school are so varied, but we've still got to take a little initiative!

Recent discussions among our students have expressed dislike for the manner in which our calendar of dates, vacations, etc., have been arranged for this year. The student council has realized this, and an investigation of the situation is underway. We are required to attend 180 days of school as specified by the district. If you have any ideas or opinions concerning this project, please make them known. Only by bringing your opinions out in the open can we hope to succeed, so please co-operate now, instead of complaining after the issue has been settled!

Collegiate Papers State: Students--Just Like Us

[ACP]—"They're students, just like us — those young men and women who started the Hungarian fight." American college students have been thinking the past few weeks. Almost every college paper carried stories of lives to aid these war-torn Hungarians. This is typical:

At the University of California at Los Angeles, Istvan Laszlo, one of the Hungarian student leaders of the recent revolution, explained how he and his friends "did not intend to fight with arms." But "we had our demands and we wanted the nation to know about them."

Sympathy Demonstration
The revolution started, he said in a story in UCLA's

DAILY BRUIN, as a demonstration of sympathy for Poland. During one demonstration, a Hungarian boy and girl entered Laszlo's city's radio building to present the student demands.

"Boy Bloody—Girl Dead"

"A few minutes later," he told the Californians, "the bleeding boy appeared at the door with the dead body of the girl in his arms. Faced with such an answer to our demands, we had to take up arms."

Laszlo's campaign includes a tour of the United States to build support for Hungary's freedom movement. The DAILY Bruin sponsored a film program with proceeds going to the Hungarian relief.

Wide Range Of Scholarships Open

Yakima Valley Junior College Present Topflight Talent Show

By ANNE FULTON

A group of Yakima Junior College students put on a talent show for the students of Columbia Basin College last Friday morning, February 15, at 10 a.m. in the college gym.

The reason for the assembly was to create a friendly relationship between the schools.

The assembly was arranged for by Dick Griffin, vice president of the CBC student body and Sandra Howerter, a Freshman representative to the student council.

Bob Sumerlin, Inter-Collegiate

Commissioner from Yakima J.C., was the Master of Ceremonies.

Included in the talent show was a women's sextet, which sang three numbers, an accordionist, who played three numbers, a mixed octet, which sang two numbers, a square-dance group called the "Vikings," which danced two numbers, a male quartet, which sang two numbers, and a male vocalist, the Yakima J.C.'s "Elvis Presley." He sang four numbers and accompanied himself on the guitar.

Yakima J.C. was closed for the day allowing more than 40 members of its student body to attend the show. They came in a car caravan with a police escort.

When they arrived at CBC they were greeted by a student welcoming committee. On this committee were: Sandra Howerter, Joy Cooper, Cherry O'Bannon, Angie McCullough, Sonja Olson, Jim Gower, Jerry Gower, Dick Griffin, Tom Burnside, and Clem Maberry.

The members of the committee showed the visitors around school and answered questions.

After the assembly, the guests were treated to lunch by the school.

According to the Yakima J.C. students who attended, a good time was had by all.

Plans have been made to have an exchange assembly with Yakima J.C. in the spring, Dick Griffin said.

Award Bulletins Posted On Board

Scholarships are available for interested CBC students, both for the spring quarter and next year. Many scholarships go unused because students do not apply for them, according to Mrs. Stappler, girls' counselor.

Those scholarships provided by CBC for the spring quarter are Work Scholarships involving one hour of work per day in the quarter, and Student Leader Scholarships for outstanding records in Music, Athletics, Dramatics, and Journalism.

CBC will offer both the Work Scholarships and Student Leader Scholarships next year. Also for next year, the following scholarships are offered by private groups to students interested in attending CBC. They are the Pasco-Kennewick Rotary Club, the Pasco-Kennewick Central Labor Council, the Chapter B.W. of P.E.O. Lewis Churchman Memorial Award, the Richland Women's Club, the Pasco-Kennewick Altruistic Scholarship Award, and the Pasco Kiwanis Sophomore Scholarship.

Scholarships are available for CBC students interested in transferring to other schools within the state.

The University of Washington is offering scholarships to students entering the University from the junior colleges of the state. The applicant must have had one full academic year at a junior college.

Graduation Plans Being Formulated

Plans for the first Columbia Basin College graduation are currently being formulated by the sophomore class. Baccalaureate services and commencement exercises will be held Sunday, June 9, at 3:00 p.m. and 8:00 p.m. respectively. Both occasions will be held at the community auditorium inasco high school.

Chuck McHaney and Judy Mylerberg, speaker committee, have scheduled the Reverend Mr. Kent Spaulding, pastor of the Pasco First Lutheran Church, to speak at the Baccalaureate services.

Other committees are Betty Anderson and June Marshall, gowns; Loren Clauch and Terry Uppenberg, social. Further plans will be announced later.

Are You An Aardvark?

By LOIS KIRK

Are you missing the opportunity to discover your own peculiarities? Are you waiting for natural selection to choose you from among the rest for great things? Are you like the aard-vark in the following story? I have met several people in school this year who did not appear to be taking a left-handed swipe at anything.

Once upon a time an aard-vark took his little boy out to dig for ants. Father aard-vark began to show him the ropes by taking a big full swing at an ant hill with his right claw. The little boy saw immediately that he was not like his father; he had a well developed left claw, his father had a well developed right claw. A clammy feeling penetrated his insectivorous quadrupedal inner regions, he knew that he was not like any of the other aard-varks.

He sat down on the ant hill and began to cry. He thought better of it, forgot his crying and began to run around in a panic. "Now," said his father, "you have learned lesson number one. Always approach your dinner with your right claw ready to go into action, never turn your back on the enemy, never fall into a depression over the fates while dinner is hot on the stove. Now what is the matter with you?"

The little boy, for some reason mysterious to him, could not tell his father his discovery. The father interpreted his silence for sullenness, gave the kid a good right-claw alongside his toothless cheek and started home in disgust.

All that day the little boy pretended he was not hungry. The father gave his mother orders that he was to dig for ants or go hungry.

That night, in the moonlight, the left-handed aard-vark went out to the ant hill to practice with his useless, clawless, right foot. Beside the path, lying white and stark in the moonlight, he saw something he had never noticed before, the skeleton of an aard-vark with a well developed left claw. He felt sick and alone. He wondered if his father had ever noticed that he had a well developed left claw. He determined to teach himself to use his right claw. He made a desperate effort with his right claw but the ants swarmed over his nose and drove him into a frenzy. In resentful silence he went home hungry to nurse his nose. He dreamed about the skeleton: He was a skeleton pawing through ant hills, they could not reach him to aggravate him because he had no flesh. He was old and obese, all the aard-varks paid him tribute of ants, he sat all day eating ants.

The next night the little left-handed aard-vark was exhausted from hunger. He practiced making right-clawed swipes. He rubbed his nose with ant repellent. He hunted up a skunk and got chummy with him. When night came, he was ready for another attack on the ant hill. The ants came at him again. In desperation he made a furious left-handed swipe at the ant hill. Unaccustomed to the left hook, the ants fell.

"I am an aard-vark! I can get along anywhere, anytime! I am an important man in the world. The aard-vark is first in the dictionary, but I am the first successful left-handed aard-vark. I have just defied Darwin. I am not specialized, I am not the fittest survivor. I am just a poor little sport who has to make his way in the world fighting all the natural selectees. I may even be able to start a new specie."

With a full stomach, peace of mind, and confidence in his ability to face the future, he went off in search of another aard-vark with whom a new species could be started.

Tolo Crowd Dance Western

By MARGARET POLAND

Columbia Basin College students, mostly in western attire, danced to the Cascade Troubadours' music last Friday in the 'Lil Abner' decorated school auditorium.

The auditorium was decorated with several large painted cut outs, 'Lil Abner, Daisy Mae, Salami the Pig, and shmoos of varied sizes and shapes, adapted from the 'Lil Abner cartoon strip. The art work was done by several CBC students.

Anne (Bunny) Fulton, General Chairman for the tolo dance, was assisted by Shirley Hoff and Lela Hooper, co-chairmen of the food committee, Joan Gibbons and Joy Pendleton, co-chairmen of the program committee, Wanda Knaunelein, chairman of decorations, committee members, and the faculty.

In addition to the entertainment by the Cascade Troubadours, Russel Love, 'Elvis Presley' for CBC, rendered numbers. His 'date', Gerson, said, "I like the tolo dance, as it gives chance to go with wants to."

Several students, before Friday, indicated they would like to dance but, due to jobs, be unable to attend.

The chaperones were Mrs. Allen Han and Mrs. Jim Devine, Mrs. Al Killingsworth and Mrs. Robert Tru-

New Dark Room Built At College

Due to the high cost of photographs, Columbia Basin College has built and equipped a dark room for the school's use.

For some time CBC has been plagued with the high cost of photography work done for the school. Two weeks ago steps were taken by Mr. Cooney; Mr. Montgomery, school custodian; Mr. Hansen, English instructor; and Mr. Booth, a student of CBC, to build and equip a dark room for the school's use.

Funds were allocated from the A.S.B. treasury for Mr. Booth to purchase the necessary equipment; Mr. Booth purchased a new lens for an enlarger which the school already had, numerous print trays, chemicals, for developing the pictures, a film cutter, safe lites for the dark room, a timer clock and a print drier.

Mr. Booth is furnishing his own camera for the schools use; he is also the technical advisor and is in charge of the dark room.

Mr. Montgomery installed a new sink in the old cloak room located behind the stage in the auditorium and painted the entire room black; without his help the dark room could not have become a reality.

The dark room is for the schools own use such as preparing pictures for the annual and the school paper. Plans are being made to organize a photography club which will use the dark room for a class room.

Board Authorizes Sale Of $375,000 In Bonds

Pasco School Board members cleared a step towards the construction of the college's academic buildings as authorized the sale of $375,000 in school bonds.

Personnel Board Visit CB Campus

Representatives of the Washington State Personnel Board and several State Government departments were on campus Tuesday, February 26, to give all students an opportunity to find out more about career opportunities in State government service.

State service offers career potential in the fields of social work, accounting, bacteriology, engineering, agriculture, fisheries, biology, personnel, recreation, public health, nursing, statistics and education, to mention only a few.

A large number of openings are available for graduates with a Bachelor's of Arts or Science in any major. Some positions require a specific major such as accounting or nursing, while others as Statistical Assistant requires only a basic statistics course.

For those interested students who were unable to contact these representatives the address is State of Washington Personnel Board, 212 General Administration Bldg., Olympia, Washington.

The bonds, part of the $575,000 voted in at the 6 general election, are on sale in the office of Pasco County Treasurer, Mr. Hales. The remaining $375,000 worth of bonds will be on sale at a later date.

The sale was approved by Beardsley Merrill, one of the district's bonding agents, Spokane.

School Director Dr. Nelson stated that the sale of bonds together with state aid will enable construction to start on the academic building in the latter part of the year.

As now planned, so vocational students moved to the district $519,327 vocational students now under construction soon as it is finished.

The projected academic building, to include rooms and a music center, later house academic classes. The building will be constructed in such a way that additions can be removed in years to create a student section and library when the growth of the presents such needs.

CBC Quintet Finish Strong At Seasons End

CBC Rolls Past Centralia Five With 68-62 Win

The blue and white quintet from Columbia Basin eked out their second consecutive win, as they dumped the Trailblazers from Centralia by a 68-62 margin in the State Junior College Conference finale.

The Hawks played in their usual style, jumping out in front with an early 28-14 lead. The Trailblazers stepped up the pace and only trailed 37-35 at half-time.

Officials whistled a total of 52 fouls for the evening, 29 against Centralia and 23 against Columbia Basin.

The Hawks looked unimpressive at the foul line, only hitting 24 out of 45 attempts for 53 per cent. Centralia hit 20 out of 36 from the charity line.

Ron Henckel, CBC forward, led all the scorers with an 18 point total, six field goals and six free throws. Bob Graham was second with 16 tallies followed by Glynn Gibson with 14 and Chuck Wilkes with 10.

New Amendment Set By Council; Vote Defeated

Voting on the proposed amendment to the Columbia Basin College constitution which would have provided for filling vacancies on the student council, was concluded last week with results unfavorable to the measure.

The amendment proposed that in the event of a vacancy or vacancies on the student council, new members would be voted in by present members rather than by an election of the entire student body, as the constitution now makes necessary. The petition of nomination with 25 student signatures would still have been necessary if the new measure had passed.

Rhumba Lesson Creates Talents

High above the glittering lights of the city in a large mirrored room, a group was meeting. Upon entering the room it appeared that there were about forty people present; they stood in pairs, moving a little now and then to the beat of that beautiful old ballad "Woe is Me."

I had not been there more than about ten minutes when one of these people, male and an estimated nineteen years of age, swayed up to me and growled "Come on Baby, lets Rumba..". Being an introvert besides a very poor dancer, I tried to decline the invitation by saying "I'd love to, I really would but I don't know how to Rumba." My declaration was too late however, for by this time we were in the middle of the dance floor and both my left feet (a characteristic of my family) were flopping against the floor like two wet fish fighting for life. "Don't worry," he said, "here at Authur Murry's everyone is just learning, just relax and I will drag you." This he did without too much trouble considering the fact that upon recognizing his superior ability, I just stood on his feet and let him finish the dance.

Suddenly the music stopped and the instructor came slinking toward the center of the room. "Now," she mumbled, "we'll work on the proper hip motion." After the demonstration the only motion in the room was the flapping of jaws.

Once again the music played and we made like worms with a nervous twitch. This is not as simple as it might appear to be, for while worms were born with a natural squirm I was not.

Now after only the beginning course I have new poise and confidence, people no longer notice the fact that I have green teeth and dirty hair, and I get to write features for "The Collegiate" which only goes to prove that there are more reasons than one to learn to Rumba.

CBC Staff Attend Meet

Attending the Washington Vocational Association Convention in Seattle the week-end of February 22-23 were seven members of the CBC staff. They were Mr. Jack Cooney, director of the College, Mr. George Askegaard, Registrar, Mrs. Venetta Stappler, Girls' Counselor and Home Economics instructor, Mr. Harold Severeid, Automotive Repair instructor, Mr. Fred Keezer, Machine Shop instructor, Mr. Wayne Rodgers, Automotive Body and Fender Rebuild instructor, and Mr. Walter Culbert, Welding instructor.

The convention was held in Seattle at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel.

Mr. George P. Askegaard, Registrar of CBC and State President of the WVA, reported on the happenings at the American Vocational Association in St. Louis, Missouri, last winter.

Mrs. Venetta Stappler reported on Home Economics.

Among other guest speakers were Mr. Roy D. Johnson, J. C. Penney Co., Seattle, who was the Honored Speaker from Industry, and Mr. Lloyd Andrews, Superintendent of Public Instruction of Washington, who was the featured speaker from Education.

Why Washington Is Capitol Name

Washington's birthday is over until next February, but the recent holiday in his honor occasioned some interest in the connection between the man and the city which was named for him. The information uncovered by an enterprising reporter may be of interest to Collegiate readers.

Why is our nation's capital named after our first president? George Washington, who is often referred to as "The Father of Our Country," is indeed the father of the District of Columbia; for it was he who selected the location of and supervised the design and construction of our nation's capital.

According to the Residence Act of 1790, the federal government was to be permanently seated beside the Potomac after ten years temporary residence in Philadelphia. Washington was given executive authority and control in the selection of a site. One vague

Math Instructor Enjoys Teaching

Playing an important role in the mathematics department of CBC is Miss Katherine Schilberg, who was born and raised in Oklahoma. She received her Bachelor of Education majoring in mathematics at the University of Oklahoma.

During the war for four years, she taught blue print reading, drafting, and electronics to the Army Air Force at Chanute Field in Illinois. As an exchange teacher to London, England in 1954-55 she gained many valuable experiences, teaching at the John Howard Grammer School which is a college prep school for students from the ages of 11½ to 18.

Miss Schilberg enjoys music, and takes in concerts and plays whenever possible. Singing in the Presbyterian Church choir is a pleasant diversion from studies and teaching.

When voicing her opinion of the college, Miss Schilberg stated, "I think CBC has a real future. It definitely will grow and is an asset for the community to have."

expression in the law, empowering the acquisition of "such quantity of land as the President shall deem proper for the United States," might have been given a limited application to public grounds and building sites, but Washington interpreted it as extending to lands sufficient for a town.

The design of the Capitol was selected by the same but even stranger means. A French architect, Stephen Hallet, entered into the contest by submitting a plan for a dome-type building designed after the Pantheon in Rome; his plan was seriously considered by Washington but was set aside by the preference of a plan submitted by a Dr. William Thornton, an amateur who had entered vigorously into the competition.

Hawks Dump Everett, 77-72

Columbia Basin's Hawks grabbed the lead in the final two minutes and went on to scuttle the Everett Trojans 77-72 on the Pasco floor in a State Junior College Conference game.

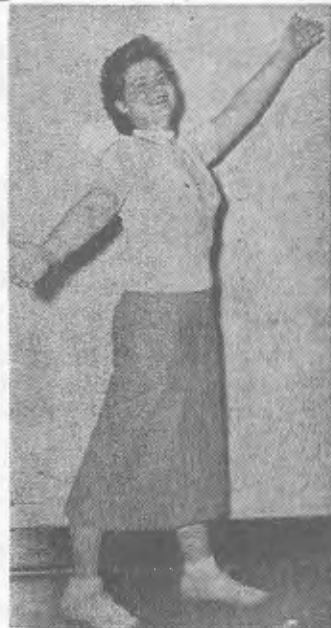

Big Dave Holden, Everett forward, topped all scorers and set a new record for the Pasco gymnasium, netting 39 points.

Sparked by the sharpshooting of Tilbert Neal and Ron Henckel, the Col-Basin five spurred to a stunning 43-28 halftime lead.

The EJC Trojans, with Holden stuffing in 25 points the second half, trimmed the Hawk lead to 69-67 with only two minutes remaining. Glynn Gibson dumped through a pair of free throws to give CBC a 71-67 lead which they never relinquished.

Til Neal, freshman forward from Richland, topped the Hawks scoring with 22 points on eight field ogals and six of seven free throws.

Three other Hawks hit the double column, Glynn Gibson dumping in 15, and Ron Henckel and Bob Graham both tallying 14.

Are You Paying Money To Thicken Elvis' Burns?

Elvis Presley and Pat Boone organizations all over the country are ruining the youth of today and ruthlessly stealing their money with all the cheap propaganda being distributed. Unfortunately this fad has also reached the college students. These organizations promoted by popular "stars" and commercialism are today one of the country's biggest rackets.

Elvis "big deal-long burned" Presley built his career on one of the nation's most "tender" ballads, Hound Dog, a real critics dream. Within a week the youth had bought over a million of his records, which put a neat sum into his pocket and even more money into the roll of the slick publicity promoters.

These organizations joined into moving clubs, which supposed to draw people closer to their hero. This is a great fallacy. The big-wheel "star" does nothing more than let the agents use his name, and then the professionals take over to get the money from the "suckers."

The corruption is furthered by the selling of hats, canes and jackets, only a quarter here and a quarter there. Few people realize that within a week, their quarters and dimes netted these phonies over two million dollars.

Disc jockeys play an important role in this fraud. Their comments on these records are of great importance to the gullible teen-ager. If the comment is favorable to the organization, the people have the youth write letters of praise to the disc jockey; if the comment is unfavorable, the members must shower him with protests.

Few people realize the thousands of letters produced by each organization. The requests for records is enormous and out of this the "star" nets priceless free advertising, while the youth get nothing but writer's cramps and minor postage bills.

The "star" receives thousands of letters a week, and his first act is to hire people who stamp his name on a cheap picture and at the bottom of a mimeographed letter. Why should you be one of the ones to be "done in?"

Now you might ask who the ones who are going to break up this monopolized group of swindlers. It's YOU! After all, do you really want to be taken for a chump?

Freshman Class Plan For Formal

The freshman class has begun planning for the sophomore formal.

The chief problem is to raise money for the project along with the problem of organization and setting a date for the dance. Angie McCullough, president, suggested that the class hold two or three mixers in March. There was much interest in being able to successfully accomplish a well-planned sophomore formal and the interest resulted in a committee being selected to look into the possibility of receiving from the student council the funds needed. Those serving on the committee to secure funds needed are Sandy Howell, Cherry O'Bannon, Angie McCullough, Sonja Olson, and Connie Buckingham. A committee report is scheduled for the next meeting which will be held in the first part of March.

The freshman class believes that through the school's operation of the sponsorship of the sophomore dance with a much help from the student the dance will be a success.
